Missouri students can learn how to keep from getting—and spreading—the flu this season. The WHACK the Flu school health flu prevention education program is now available with downloadable educational materials such as a skit, song, activity booklet, posters, etc. for pre-K–5 classrooms. The program teaches young students how to help protect themselves and others from illness by using effective hygiene habits, such as washing hands appropriately and covering their coughs and sneezes. Older students, school staff, or community volunteers can be recruited and trained to perform the fun 5-minute classroom skit. For more information, go to www.dhss.mo.gov/WHACK/ or contact Alyce Turner at Alyce.Turner@dhss.mo.gov.
