

Pamela P. Kelly

Pamela Kelly is Director of Partnerships & Initiatives at Health Literacy Missouri. Pam has a very strong background in health, business and fundraising. Most recently, Pam worked at William Woods University in Fulton, MO, where she sought private contributions to bolster the school's educational and global programs. Prior, Pam served as an assistant director of telemedicine at the University of Missouri, School of Medicine. She distinguished herself with her ability to build long-lasting, loyal relationships with partners while working to develop unique programs to meet market demand.

Pam earned her bachelor's degree in business administration at Columbia College and a master's in business administration at William Woods University. She also holds a master's degree in jurisprudence in health law from School of Law, Loyola University Chicago. She has lent her expertise on several state task forces in hopes of improving the health of all Missourians. She is a civic leader with a history of strong support and advocacy for her community through the United Way, Court Appointed Special Advocate, and Humanity for Children.