This year's conference will be looking at bariatric or weight loss surgery in children. As the pediatric population continues to increase in the rate of obesity, we are faced with morbidly obese children with medical complications that are being considered for weight loss surgery. This teleconference will first assess interventions to possibly prevent the need for surgery. But if surgery is considered, the teleconference also will review the criteria for surgery as well as look at the nutritional and psychological concerns before and after surgery.
