

Question 17

One component of internal control standards is the assignment of key steps in processing transactions to different individuals in an organization. For example, the person who writes the checks should not be the person who balances the accounts. Mark Yes if your organization has assigned each step to separate personnel.